SEEING BETTER DAYS.

The widow Miston had seen better days. How far back wasn't exactly certified; but she had seen them. Better days hung moldily about her, like the days hung moldily about her, like the defaced shreds of antiquated embroid-

Tom was a sturdy, brown-faced lad, who picked up a living by doing odd jobs for the boatmen, and now and then send him for your things." stupidly content, poor Tom! so beaming and good-natured over beggarliness and a red shirt, Tom took the world easily, seeming to covet it for himself.

The widow deemed it due to her past respectability to be seen at church of a together, she with her clean pocket andkerchief folded over her old hymn book and a certain doubtful hesitancy of gait, as if heaven itself might be lookng down critically on her shabby black gown and rusty bonnet. As for Tom, patient Tom, he went plodding slowly after her, with his smiling face, whistling to himself as he went. Always pa-tient, always plodding, poor Tom! The minister of the parish, mistakes soul, deemed it incumbent to make a call on the widow; and, on charity bent, it is said unwarily offered to employ her services in his household for a season. He deemed it his duty to rouse the old woman to activity.

He did rouse her; and it is averred that he never found time to call at the cabin again. Did he take her for a common household drudges, or a lowborn field hand? She thanked God she had too much spirit left yet to put herrelf under anybody's feet. He hadn't diggers, but he might go further before he knew a lady when he saw her.

It might have been the afternoon after the good man's visit that the widow sat idly brooding at her cabin door.
